Drawing a Splinter.

Removing a splinter from a suffering hand may not be a nice and pleasant subject, but home surgery may sometimes give some one a feeling of heartfelt joy. The sufferer who illustrates the matter on this occasion was a carpenter. He was working at his trade at an institution over which the sisters of the Roman Catholic church presided. One day he broke off an ugly splinter in his hand and could not get it out. He went home at the close of his day's work feeling no annoyance from the wound, but by the next morning the hand was in a serious condition and so painful that working was as impossible. On his way to the doctor's the carpenter stopped to tell the sisters why he must delay his work.

"Let me see what I can do with your hand before you go to the doctor," said one of the sisters. The man demurred. "Yes," said the sister, with gentle insistence, "it will do no harm anyway."

She quickly filled within an inch or so of the top a rather wide mouthed bottle with steaming hot water, and as she held it another sister pressed the inflamed part of the injured hand gently down over the opening. Such a peculiar sensation! It seemed to the man that his whole hand was being drawn with great force into the bottle. He would have taken it away, but the sister was holding it gently, but firmly. Then there was a feeling of relief. It seemed as if the inside of that hand had become liquid and was pouring its unpleasant contents into the bottle. That was almost exactly what was happening, and with the liquid went the offending splinter. The hand was bathed and bandaged, and the carpenter continued his work without further inconvenience.—New York Times.

How Sugar Is Refined.

The method used by the best sugar refineries is substantially as follows:

The raw sugar is dissolved in large cisterns on the ground floor, enough hot water being added to produce a specific gravity of 1.25.

The solution is then drawn through a connecting pipe having a coarse wire strainer into large pumps, by which it is pumped into the highest story of the building, usually the seventh or eighth.

It then passes down to the next floor, where it is filtered through a series of bags, each made of two thicknesses of cloth, an outer one of coarse and an inner one of fine cotton.

The bags are inclosed in boxes to prevent cooling.

After leaving these the syrup is run through filters of boneblack, which absorbs all the coloring matter left in it.

After leaving these it is pumped into vacuum pans, large vessels heated by steam and exhausted by air-pumps.

The pressure being thus reduced, the liquid is boiled at a lower and lower temperature until, at 140 degrees, evaporation is complete and the syrup rapidly crystallizes into sugar.

This is the process by which the best white sugar is made, while poorer qualities are prepared by a method less complete.—St. Louis Republic.

The March of the Men of Harlech.

In military music the march occupies a prominent position and has been employed not only to stimulate courage, but also from about the middle of the seventeenth century to insure the orderly advance of troops. One of the earliest instances of rhythmical march is the Welsh war strain, "The March of the Men of Harlech," which is supposed to have originated during the siege of Harlech castle in 1468. In England the military march was of somewhat later development.

Sir John Hawkins in his "History of Music" tells us that its characteristic was dignity and gravity, in which respect it differed greatly from the French, which was brisk and alert, and apropos of this subject the same author quotes a witty reply of an Elizabethan soldier to the French Marshal Birion's remark that "the English march, being beaten by the drum, was slow, heavy and sluggish." "That may be true," he said, "but slow as it is it has traversed your master's country from one end to the other!"—Chambers' Journal.

Colored Mrs. Parlington.

In spite of all that the public schools can do the colored person still gets terribly tangled up with the English language.

A lady lately sent her colored servant to hang out the washing, and before long the girl returned and remarked, "Mrs. —, the wind is playing hammock with those clothes!"

Coming back one day from the office of a physician, where she had been treated for an ailment, the same girl said in answer to an inquiry as to how the doctor had prescribed for her, "Oh, he gave me some elder down to paint my side with!" (It turned out to be iodine.)

Boston Transcript.

To Be Kept Secret.

He was a great bore and was talking to a crowd about the coming local election. Said he: "Gibbs is a good man; he is capable, honest, fearless and conscientious. He will make the very kind of representative we need. He once saved my life from drowning."

"Do you really want to see Gibbs elected?" said a solemn-faced old man.

"I do, indeed. I'd give anything to see him elected," answered the bore.

"Then never let anybody know he saved your life," counseled the solemn-faced man.—London Tit-Bits.

Right From the Vineyards.

"So you've decided not to buy Lord Hardinge's castle, have you?"

"Yes," said Mr. Newrocks. "He wanted to include 10,000 bottles of wine at $1 a bottle and admitted that some of it was 40 years old. Why, I can get it right from the vineyards for less'n that!"—Chicago Post.

Love has a long way to go to reach the heart of the modern up-to-date young man. When he looks for a wife, he expects good looks, good sense, good nature, good health. They usually go together.

As observed, man feels that a woman who is physically weak and unattractive, likely to be ill-natured too. The sweetest temper is ruined by continual sickness.

A woman whose nerves are constantly racked and dragged by debilitating drains and inflammation cannot be a genial companion or happy wife; and she is totally unfitted to be a mother.

These traits are almost universally manifested, largely because of carelessness and neglect. There is no real need of them. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a positive specific for the weaknesses and diseases of the feminine organism.

It cures them radically and completely. It heals, strengthens and purifies. It is the only scientific remedy devised for this special purpose by an educated, skilled physician. It is a truly medicinal, but makes no affected ease and absolutely safe.

Miss Laetitia McNeese, of Reno (P. O. Box 722), Washoe Co., Nev., writes: "I have discontinued taking the 'Prescription' and will not take any more (at present). Last month I had no attacks of colds, even though I was in the open air and exposed to inclemency whatever. It was the first time I never had pain during that period. I cannot say too much for your medicines, especially the 'Favorite Prescription'."

One of the girls who took one bottle of your 'Favorite Prescription' and she says she was not sick like she was with her first baby. This was her second baby. She thinks it a great medicine. So do I."

Dr. Pierce has had a lifetime of experience in this particular field. His 1000-page illustrated book, "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser," contains several chapters devoted to woman's special physiology. A paper-bound copy will be sent free on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps to pay the cost of mailing only. Address, World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y. For a cloth-bound copy send 31 stamps.

TWO FINANCIAL PLATFORMS.

which do the People Prefer?

EDITOR JOURNAL.—There is a great difference in the financial planks of the Populist and Democratic National platforms. The Democratic platform demands that the United States legal tender paper money be made redeemable in coin. The Populist platform makes the United States legal tender paper money equal, before the law, to gold or silver coin. Or, in other words, it does not propose to place the finances of the United States at the tender mercy of the money sharks by making its legal tenders a promise to pay coin on demand.

The volume of debt is so large in the United States at the present time that the interest on it can never be paid in coin. It takes at least $400,000,000 per year to pay the interest which we owe to foreign creditors and at least two billion dollars a year to pay the interest due to domestic creditors, and I will defy any financier to show how this interest can be paid on a coin basis, except by increasing the obligations.

Let us take a glance at how our favorable trade balance, amounting to upwards of $300,000,000 for 1897, was settled on a gold basis.

The aliens checked it up on interest account and still have many millions more to their credit, and in addition to this they have taken many new bonds, while what we owe them in 1896 has not been reduced a farthing, but is largely increased.

Another serious objection to making Uncle Sam's paper money redeemable in coin is because our European creditors can take the coin across the Atlantic and demand bonds for its return.

Or our domestic creditors could withdraw it from circulation and demand extortionate terms for its use and if Uncle Sam did not suspend specie redemption he would also become a sufferer and would have to issue as many bonds as the coin sharks demanded.

With the free coinage of gold and silver at the present legal ratio for coinage to be supplemented with an issue of legal tender paper money sufficient to meet the needs of the people, the silver bullion would never be worth less than $1.29 per ounce in lawful money, and the people would have a sufficiency of money to transact their business on a cash basis and the present system of long credit, paid and disaster would be abolished.

With the free coinage of gold and silver at the present legal ratio for coinage to be supplemented with an issue of legal tender paper money sufficient to meet the needs of the people, the silver bullion would never be worth less than $1.29 per ounce in lawful money, and the people would have a sufficiency of money to transact their business on a cash basis and the present system of long credit, paid and disaster would be abolished.

One demonstrated the locomotive of the future, whether the power be furnished by steam or electricity is no material difference. The idea is to gain greater speed, pulling power and safety. The principle is based on friction and comprises separately drive, friction and track wheels, three sets in fact. The first work on the second and the second on the last. The friction and track wheels are built on a proportionate principle to the size of the drive wheels, approximately a little over one-third the diameter of the latter. The track wheels are so small that a high rate of speed can be attained without danger of leaving the track. Each drive wheel works on two friction wheels and each of the latter on two small track wheels. The arrangement of the various sets is such as to avoid increased width or height of the engine, each set being in a position so as to come in contact with the other on the inner and outer rims, so that instead of being directly above each other they are set inward and to wards the middle of the engine and move upon each other, the larger and heavier wheels being inside of the track and about twelve inches above it.

Instead of pistons, driving rods, etc., and in order to do away with much of the pounding and jerking caused by the irregular work of pistons and the extra power necessary to raise the heavy driving rods, a system of wheels are to be used to transmit the power. Steam is conducted by pipes into a steam or hollow wheel, the latter is run by a small motor so attached to the reverse lever that the steam can be directed to propel the engine forward or backward.

The air pump is placed in front of the drive wheels and is so connected that the steam from the propelling wheels works the pump and brake apparatus and is controlled by a governor and returned to the boiler to be used again. This saves the necessity of taking water so frequently.

A new character of brake shoes is a feature, there being two sets, one to be used for down grades to regulate the speed, while the other can be used in an emergency, were a sudden stop is necessary. A feature is also offered to prevent trouble from hot boxes and will be effective under the highest rate of speed.

Mr. Nicholas talks as if he thoroughly understood the principles he is anxious to introduce into mechanics and insists that the machinery is of the simplest kind and in time will revolutionize the present methods of fast travel, not only as far as speed is concerned, but in safety and economy.

We are not mechanic enough to understand all he told us, but when he had finished we were convinced that the number of wheels in our head, although quite numerous at present, had been increased about ten fold.

Mr. Richard Kirman of Carson was married at San Francisco to Miss Mable J. King of the latter city. Mr. Kirman is well known in western Nevada.

The Carson News has procured a type-setting machine. Gradually and by degrees the intelligent compositor will find it necessary to take a mixing course at some progressive university and cast his lines in the Klondike.

It is said that the wires were kept hot yesterday with protests of Nevada Republicans against the appointment of Mr. Mayhugh. Their protests are not likely to have much weight with the President or Senate. The "pig" has gone from their gaze.—Elko Independent.

W. B. Duvall of Elko is spoken of as a possible candidate for Congress. Someone gives the Denver Republican a "song and dance" regarding the Sonatorial and Congressional possibilities for Nevada at the coming election. Mr. Duvall may be all that is said of him in the Denver Republican article, but it is a good guess, to bet that not more than a baker's dozen of people in the western part of the State ever heard of him.

"Pot Boilers Emerging."

After weeks in the forest of Fontainebleau it is difficult to realize its monotony, amplitude, its endless repetition of similar prospects. And yet as a forest it has no surpassing beauty. One may compare it with Dartmoor—Dartmoor paled of its highest tors and set thickly with young trees, growing close as the moss on a boulder. It is a rolling upland with a scanty mantle of soil, through the frequent gaps in which the broken gray boulders of the naked earth sometimes rise in fantastic heaps, sometimes line concavities a mile across, or fringe the gaping lips of long ravines. Like Dartmoor, the surface is arid, and you may tramp miles and see never a pool, and yet, on every side you may descend from the forest by green valleys into green plains and find brooks leaping miraculously from the dusty rocks to dip under fringing willows.

It is to these happy shirts of the forest that the painters' villages cling; Barbizon, advertised by Stevenson and now abandoned to the cultured tourist; Cerny, with its great village square; Marlotte, smothered under masses of laces like a child laughing in new mown hay; Moret, on the Seine, with its towers, steep pitched bridge, its mills and ruined castles and spreading river, and a dozen others. The simplest of them turn austere faces to the solemn spaciousness of the forest, but their sweet gardens give access to the green comforts of the plain; an image maybe of the artists themselves; high unprofitable aims in the salon; pot boilers emerging and red wine coming in by the studio doors.—Saturday Review.

"Musio," said the eminent pianist, as the reporter to whom he had kindly accorded an interview ran his pencil rapidly over the paper, "is the most elevating of sciences. It refines the sensibilities and enlarges the heart. It—what were you about to ask?"

"I should like to know, sir, how you regard the distinguished pianist Professor von Bergstein as a musician?"

"He is nothing, sir, but a cheap, vile imitator; a base counterfeit, a tenth-rate keyboard banger, sir," exclaimed the eminent musician, scowling.—Strand Magazine.

Mitigating Circumstance.
